

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Martha McCarthy is in the educational leadership unit at Indiana University, where she serves as Chancellor's Professor and Director of the High School Survey of Student Engagement (HSSSE). She teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in educational law and policy. Her primary research interests pertain to church/state relations involving schools, free expression rights, equity concerns, privatization of education, and school improvement and student engagement at the high school level.

Rosemary Papa is Professor of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies at California State University Sacramento, and serves as Director of the University's Center for Teaching and Learning; working with faculty across all disciplines and colleges. Papa is the past president of both the National Council of Professors of Educational Administration and the California Association of Professors of Educational Administration.

John Hoyle is Professor of Educational Administration at Texas A&M University and specializes on the superintendency, leadership research, and futures studies. He is a past president of the National Council of Professors of Educational Administration and served as Chair of the AASA National Commission on Professional Standards for the Superintendency. He is a popular consultant, seminar leader, and motivational speaker.

Betty Alford is Professor of Educational Administration at Stephen F. Austin State University. She also serves as the Department Chair and Coordinator of Doctoral Studies. She has a long service record with the National Council of Professors of Educational Administration and presently sits on the Executive Board. Her present duties include serving as a reviewer for NCATE accreditations with the Educational Leadership Constituent Council.

Charles Achilles is Professor at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilant, MI and Seton Hall University in South Orange, N.J. He has previously taught at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. He has taught in public and private elementary and secondary schools and has extensive administrative experience in public schools and higher education. His research interests include class size, public confidence, teacher/pupil communications, preparation programs, school effectiveness and change.

Fenwick English is Professor of Educational Leadership at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He has been a superintendent of schools in New York, an assistant superintendent of schools in Florida, and a middle school principal in California. He recently served as general editor of the 2006 SAGE Encyclopedia of Educational Leadership and School Administration.

Joseph Murphy is Professor of Educational Leadership and Policy at Vanderbilt University. He has served as an administrator at school, district, and state levels and at the university level served as Department Chair and Associate Dean. His research is in the area of school improvement, with special emphasis on leadership and policy. He currently serves as Chair of the Interstate Schools Leaders Licensure Consortium (ISLLC).

Robert Beach is Professor and Director of the Doctoral Program in Educational Leadership at Alabama State University. He is the former Executive Director of NCPEA and currently serves as the Co-cordinator of the Connexions Project for NCPEA. He is widely published and specializes in the area of school policy and planning.

James Berry is Professor of Educational Administration at Eastern Michigan University where he specializes in the Principalship. He has an extensive background in higher education administration and is a former NCPEA executive board member. He presently serves as Co-cordinator of the Connexions Project for NCPEA.

Theodore Creighton is Professor of Educational Leadership and Director of the Center for Research and Doctoral Studies in Educational Leadership at Sam Houston State University. He is currently the Executive Director of NCPEA and serves as Chair of the National Policy Board for Educational Administration.

Michelle Young is Professor at the University of Texas at Austin where she also serves as the Executive Director of the University Council of Educational Administration (UCEA). She is widely published in the area of educational reform and policy at the national level. She also sits on the National Policy Board for Educational Administration.

James Smith is Dean and Professor of Leadership and Policy Studies at Bowling Green State University. Smith is widely published in the area of standardized testing, assessment, and educational standards and has written extensively on the investigation of corporate solutions to public school effectiveness. In addition, he specializes in business practices applied to school leadership.